

NATIONAL DATA CENTER PROVIDER, CRG WEST, UNVEILS NEW NAME

One of the largest data center providers in the United States, CRG West will change its name to "CoreSite – A Carlyle Company" and deliver enhanced customer-focused services.

Denver, CO – June 22, 2009 – CRG West, LLC, privately held national data center company and wholly-owned subsidiary of The Carlyle Group, announced today the launch of a new brand and legal corporate identity: "CoreSite – A Carlyle Company." The name change reflects a new customer-focused company designed to deliver the security, reliability and communications opportunities that enterprises need to compete in the global marketplace.

Established in 2001 as CRG West at One Wilshire in Los Angeles and Market Post Tower in San Jose, CoreSite wholesale data centers and colocation facilities are also now located in Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Northern Virginia, the San Francisco Bay Area and Washington D.C., totaling more than two million square feet of service area. The rebrand marks the successful completion of CoreSite's migration of administrative processes to its newly-formed headquarters in Denver, Colorado, and the overhaul of company processes designed to make business easier for its customers.

Emerging as the only nationwide provider offering both wholesale data center space and colocation services, CoreSite boasts a client base that includes more than 500 organizations ranging from high-growth startups to major international financial exchanges and established Fortune 500 enterprises.

Further strengthening its partnership with every customer, CoreSite now offers additional support systems, an industry-leading account management tool called MyCoreSite, and enhanced employee resources. Consistent with its commitment, CoreSite's future data center designs and operations will emphasize energy efficiency, reliability and practicality.

"Employees at CoreSite have anticipated this announcement for some time now," commented Thomas M. Ray, CoreSite's President and CEO. "It brings me great pleasure to use the many accomplishments of CRG West, in conjunction with recent additions to our support systems, to create what we believe is an offering unmatched in the data center industry. We welcome you all to CoreSite – A Carlyle Company."

CoreSite will hold a public Webinar at 2:00 p.m. MST on June 22nd to officially reveal the new name and identity. An archived version of the Webinar will be available on the company Web site: www.CoreSite.com.
